Guidelines for Donating Medical Books, Journals, and Media Overseas

The Humanitarian Efforts program of the American Academy of Otolaryngology—Head and Neck Surgery Foundation offers this list of US-based nonprofit organizations that accept donations of medical educational publications. Contact the specific institution or program in advance to make sure it is still accepting materials and that what you have is what they need. Sending inappropriate materials is more harmful than sending none. Plan your shipment by sorting, weeding, and discarding inappropriate materials before sending. Medical and health sciences libraries with books and/or journals to discard may be interested in listing their materials with the Health Literature Exchange service run by the World Health Organization. To learn more about the AAO-HNSF humanitarian program, contact humanitarian@entnet.org or 1-703-535-3738.

Materials needed: new books, journal subscriptions, and special collections including medicine and science. In each country, a designated non-profit partner organization, or affiliate, is responsible for title selection, identification of recipient institutions and countrywide distribution. From inventory lists provided by Sabre via e-mail, partners are able to select titles and quantities. The books and journals are then packed at Sabre's warehouse and sent in ocean freight containers (holding on average over 20,000 books). On-going programs receive between one and three containers per year, depending on the size of the program and available funding. Prospective recipients are encouraged to contact the in-country partner organization for information on obtaining donated books. A list of partner organizations and affiliates is available on Sabre's web site.

A charitable organization and a registered private voluntary organization with the US Agency for International Development. Sabre's Scientific Assistance Project specializes in providing educational and professional materials to institutions and individuals in Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and selected countries in other regions of the world. Since 1986, Sabre Foundation has donated more than three million books and journals overseas. More than 200 US and European publishers have contributed new texts.

Periodicals in all academic fields, with greatest strength in medicine, science, technology, and information processing. Each week USBE sets aside for free distribution to libraries in developing countries and libraries that have severe budgetary problems in all other locations hundreds of bound volumes and thousands of unbound issues of periodicals. Included in the selection are periodicals in all academic fields as well as magazines of popular interest. Dates of publication may vary widely. The Donational Program's greatest strength is in medicine, science, and technology, including computer science.

Libraries wishing to participate in the Donational Program must affirm that the periodicals received through the Program will not be sold and may be freely used by all persons who normally have access to the receiving library's collections. Publications received from the Donational Program may be exchanged or given at no charge to other institutions.

USBE regrets that it cannot provide specific titles or issues through the Donational Program but libraries are invited to become full members of USBE and make specific requests, following procedures detailed in the USBE SHELF LIST and at the USBE website (http://www.usbe.com).

Since 1992 when the Donational Program was re-activated, USBE has shipped approximately two million (2,000,000) periodicals to libraries in Tanzania, Uganda, Haiti, Philippines, Belarus, Pakistan, Peru, Ecuador, South Korea, and Vietnam as well as to several institutions in the United States. At present USBE is equipped to send only full container lots of periodicals to libraries. Containers hold approximately 10,000 kilos packed in Gaylord boxes on pallets. Receiving libraries are responsible for all preparation and transportation charges. USBE will make shipping arrangements as the receiving library requests.

Iraq

Help for Health Care in Iraq Contact: Captain Alexander Garza, M.D. Address donations to: American Red Cross, ATTN: American Red Cross Station Manager (CA), G1 HHC 4ID, Unit 92628, APO AE 09323-2628

Books and Journals: Requesting basic textbooks in areas such as pathology, microbiology, pharmacology, biochemistry, anatomy, histology, and molecular biology; clinical textbooks in all areas of medicine, surgery, pediatrics, OB/GYN, and any other basic texts. Please send only current editions (or no more than one edition out of date, published in the last 5 years) and in reasonably good condition. Nursing and pharmacy publications are also needed. General, specialty and subspecialty journals published in the last 5 years are in great demand; in particular, those devoted to medicine, surgery, OB/GYN, pediatrics, orthopedics, ophthalmology, plastic surgery and reconstructive surgery, emergency medicine, ENT, nursing, and pharmacy.

Equipment and Software, Small items, such as stethoscopes, ophthalmoscopes, otoscopes, and blood pressure cuffs, are very welcome. In addition, teaching aids such as dissection models, teaching slides, videotapes, or computer software would be put to good use. Donors are kindly requested to pay postage, which will be reasonable to the APO address. Please include Dr. Garza's name somewhere on the package.

Dr. Garza is serving as the Public Health Team Chief for the 418th Civil Affairs Battalion, a branch of the US Army Special Operations, attached to the 4th Infantry Division. In assessing the status of the health care system, the desperate need for current resources was identified. Dr. Garza and his team discovered the terribly neglected hospitals and clinics that serve the people of Iraq, in stark contrast to the no-expense-spared personal facilities used by Saddam's regime. Likewise, the medical school and its library have very limited resources. Dr. Garza is urgently appealing for materials to help bring the health care workers in Iraq up to reasonable standards.
