

Robert T. Sataloff, MD, DMA

Candidate for At-Large Director Academic (four-year term)

What do you see as the essential task of the Directors and in what ways are you well suited to that role? What do you think is the most important issue that our Academy is currently facing?

The essential task of a Director is to identify and help fulfill the needs of our specialty, while expanding recognition of the Academy's relevance and engaging otolaryngologists (academic and private) in our national organization. I hope to help by providing perspectives gleaned from a 40-year career in academic otolaryngology integrated with a self-employed clinical practice model.

As Professor and Chair and Senior Associate Dean at Drexel. I am employed for academic and leadership activities, but my clinical practice is independent. While being active academically (more than 1,000 publications including 69 books, and journal editor), I have advocated for private practice interests. I also serve as the Academy's representative to the AMA for impairment (AMA Guides); spent more than 20 years on the Voice Committee (six as Chair); served as a member and chair of the Geriatric Committee; have served on the Board of Governors for 16 years; and have taught Academy courses and presented papers and seminars for four decades. I have served in numerous other leadership capacities for the Academy and the specialty including President of the American Laryngological Association, President of the American Society of Geriatric Otolaryngology, President of the Pennsylvania Academy of Otolaryngology – Head and Neck Surgery (PAO-HNS), and others. I remain active on the PAO-HNS Council and am involved actively in legislative and political advocacy on behalf of otolaryngologists. In addition, I proposed and help initiate the AAO-HNSF annual leadership meeting of state society presidents and executive directors.

I support all of the objectives in the Academy's strategic plan, but the most important is "quality". Developing and promulgating excellence is the foundation upon which all of our initiatives must be built; and doing so in the current environment is the most important issue that the Academy is facing.

I would be honored to help.

I believe that the primary responsibility of a Director is to identify and help fulfill the current needs of our specialty, while expanding recognition of the Academy's relevance and engaging otolaryngologists (academic and private) who remain estranged from our national organization. I am pursuing this position in order to serve the Academy by providing perspectives gleaned from a lifetime of academic otolaryngology integrated with a self-employed clinical practice model.

I serve as Professor and Chair of the Department of Otolaryngology – Head and Neck Surgery and Senior Associate Dean at Drexel University College of Medicine. While I am employed for academic and leadership activities, my clinical practice has remained independent. So, while we function as any other full-time academic department, we also enjoy all of the freedoms and challenges of a privately-owned clinical practice. While being active academically (more than 1,000 publications including 67 books, and Editor-in-Chief of two journals), I also have advocated for private practice interests locally, regionally and nationally; and I provide interdisciplinary fellowship training not only for physicians but also for allied health professionals. In addition, I serve as the Academy's representative to the AMA for issues of impairment (AMA Guides); have spent more than 20 years on the Voice Committee (six as Chair); have served as a member and chair of the Geriatric Committee; have served on the Board of Governors for 14 years; and have taught Academy courses and presented papers and seminars for more than nearly four decades. I have served in numerous other leadership capacities for the Academy and the specialty including President of the American Laryngological Association (ALA), President of the American Society of Geriatric Otolaryngology (ASGO), President of the Pennsylvania Academy of Otolaryngology – Head and Neck Surgery (PAO-HNS), and others. I remain active on the PAO-HNS Council and am involved actively in legislative and political advocacy on behalf of otolaryngologists. In addition, I proposed the annual leadership meeting of state society presidents and executive directors and helped bring the first meeting to fruition.

While I support all of the objectives in the Academy's strategic plan, the most important is "quality". Developing and promulgating excellence is the foundation upon which all the other strategic objectives must be built.

I would be honored to serve the AAO-HNSF as a Director-at-Large and to contribute to expanding our Academy's vision and involving an increasing percentage of otolaryngologists in Academy initiatives.
